TOWN TRIFLES.

-" Trifles light as air."

When our family used to write for the REPUBLICAN they said the way to commence was to make a few preliminaries. and then, unravel--like a ball of yarn. I don't know anything about "preliminaries," I am an old lady, and I will just arrange my "specs" and then begin, 12 m. I was up to Bourbon, visiting, (I go visiting to learn the news,) and up there they call Plymouth a "sleepy village," so I thought I would come here and see what the people are doing. Some things I like and some things I don't like. Our family used to write for the REPUBLICAN, to be the store where the proprietor does and I told 'the "old man" that was bound to put in my "say" the next time. We didn't write any more, for Horace Greeley says every man in the "old man" got led astray, as old trade, no matter if he sells nothing but Elder Brown used to call it, and pawned pea nuts, ought to put as much in adver- my specs for "tangle-foot," (That's what they call it in Bourbon.)
